BAE Systems Names Ed Gallagher as Northeast Regional Sales Manager for HybriDrive® Systems

JOHNSON CITY, New York — BAE Systems has named Ed Gallagher as Northeast regional sales manager for its HybriDrive® hybrid electric propulsion system.

In this position, Gallagher is responsible for HybriDrive series system sales in the Northeast portion of the United States and Canada – consisting of nine states (including New York, Massachusetts, and New Jersey) and three provinces.

The HybriDrive series propulsion system powers the world's largest hybrid bus fleet and carries more than two million passengers every day. Buses equipped with HybriDrive series have traveled over 300 million miles, prevented over 280,000 tons of CO₂ emissions and have saved over 25 million gallons of diesel fuel. More than 3,500 systems have been ordered or delivered across North America and the U.K.

Gallagher joined BAE Systems earlier this year. He previously served as Northeast regional sales manager for American Seating. Prior to that, Gallagher worked as a regional sales representative for Muncie Transit Supply. He started his career at A.J. Oster Company, a copper-based metals distributor, as a materials manager eventually working his way up to distributor sales manager. He is based in Bethlehem, Pa.
